

The Innocence of Our Love

Paul N. Dion / Allen M. Dion

My soul knows that it loves you.
Although my head says no, that can't be.
Your eyes, they show me something.
Is it plain for all to see?

I've had your loyal friendship throughout these many years.
You've been my friend until the end.
I contend that your plan was to guide
And remind me of my calling and my mission.
My friend.

My heart has tried to warn me. Someday I'll have to say goodbye.
And my thoughts can be confusing, but it's clear what I must say.

You've had my loyal friendship throughout these many years.
I've been your friend until the end.
I contend that my plan was to always
Remind you of your calling and your mission.
My friend.

The world may never know the pureness of our love.
Remember me, my friend, as I watch from above.

My soul will always love you.
There's no doubt in my mind.
This life has shown me one thing, and it's as plain as it could be.

Our love, so rare.
A loyal friend to the end,
Hold my hand and tell me goodbye.
